Tentative Decision Announced for Pensacola Region Community Support Competition

PENSACOLA, Fla. – Captain Randy Bahr, commanding officer, Naval Air Station (NAS) Pensacola, announced today that a tentative decision has been made on the Community Support competition portion of the Commercial Activities Studies for the Pensacola Naval Regional Complex.

The tentative decision is to perform Morale, Welfare and Recreation, Bachelor Housing, Family Housing and Public Affairs support services at NAS Pensacola by government civilian personnel.

The cost comparison between government civilian and contract performance favored government civilian performance by nearly $26 million over a five-year period. The decision to perform the function by government civilian personnel is referred to as “tentative” because interested parties have 30 days to submit an appeal. The final decision will be made after the appeals process is complete.

The Community Support function currently employs approximately 634 civilian personnel.

Skills represented in this competition include managerial, supervisory, recreational specialists, hospitality specialists, housing specialists, crafts and industry trades and laborers.
